Attorney Helps Create Educational Opportunities for Underserved Students

"I'm not just serving my clients' needs, I'm helping build a better community for future generations."

Attorney Kimberly Steele isn't shy about her passion for education. Her love of academics can be traced to her earlier days spent as house counsel for the Oklahoma City Public School District. Today, Kimberly offers estate planning services at her own law office in northeast Oklahoma City where she plays an even more critical role in advocating education throughout our community.

"Recently, I had the opportunity to assist a client keep his legacy alive as a professional musician by providing scholarship opportunities to underserved public school students," said Kimberly. "Creating estate plans like this is what inspires me to get up the next day and do it all over again."

The Oklahoma City Community Foundation's emphasis on practical implementation helps Kimberly construct estate plans for her clients that meet both their financial and charitable goals. Though her clients are the ones making a difference in the lives of others, Kimberly's heart is filled with joy knowing she provides an avenue for her clients to contribute to important charitable causes.

"Education is the cornerstone for individual prosperity and community growth," said Kimberly. "By working with the Oklahoma City Community Foundation, I'm helping my clients create educational and financial opportunities that will help our community grow and prosper."
